

From Steve Simoes, VT DEC on the definition of tanks and containers:

In 2010 Vermont DEC dealt with a storage facility permit for ENPRO Services of Vermont (EVI). EVI proposed placing two 1,000-gallon poly "storage devices" in the facility for managing certain state-listed aqueous wastes. I say "storage devices" because EVI initially thought of them as "containers" while we considered them "tanks." In the end, because the devices were not designed/intended for over-the-road transport when full, DEC addressed them in the permit as tanks.

The following is a link to the EVI permit. Readers need to scroll to "Appendix G" in the approximate mid-point of the document and the "Process Information" section (Section D), which includes pictures, manufacturer diagrams, a tank assessment, and other information.

http://www.anr.state.vt.us/dec/wastediv/rcra/documents/Final2010EnproPermit_OneDocument.pdf

October 14, 2014